

Monday, January 12, 2009

Georgian Perspectives on Aid | Survey Data

How do Georgians look at the influx of foreign aid? And how do they interpret what is coming in? How should it be spent? These are questions that Transparency International wanted to find out about last November. We added the questions to an ongoing survey. The results, in the meantime, have also been published in the Caucasus Analytical Digest, a new online publication that summarizes key findings, and combines them with short analysis pieces.

What are the Top Three Priorities for Spending Aid Money in Georgia?

If the image is too small, click on it to increase it in size.

What is the Most Effective Way of Making Sure That Aid Money is not Stolen or Wasted in Georgia?

Interested in more? Check out the Caucasus Analytical Digest, and, for the thoughtful and engaging Transparency International report go directly to their website.